

A Different Kind Of Dentistry

My Personal Experience With An Indianapolis Cosmetic Dentist

-Editor, J.K.

Indianapolis Cosmetic dentist Dr. Brad Sammons has had the opportunity to meet with many people who have put off needing dental treatment. In fact, he's observed himself how it's really a majority of people who have an anxiety of dental care at some level.

Now, anyone who has had a chance to get to know me knows that I count myself among these. I'm not ashamed to admit that I was actually described as "the second worst patient" a cosmetic dentist had ever had, just barely avoiding an exciting ride in an emergency vehicle.

The reason I mention all of this is because I've found that there's more of us out there, than we might think.

Unfortunately, many of the people I've had a chance to talk to, have somehow just decided that having an uncomfortable or uncaring dental appointment is a part of life. I know I am personally grateful to see that there are dentists out there, who understand what to do differently and care enough to do it.

I had an opportunity on several occasions to talk to Dr. Sammons about my own personal fears, and to see first-hand how his dignified understanding and personal warmth really made an impact on me. If you are searching for an Indianapolis cosmetic dentist who really cares about the concerns of his patients – and a team who offers you alternatives to improve your experience at each visit – consider a dentist who has already spent a lot of time helping those with this specific challenge. It can mean the difference between continuing to wonder if everything's OK because of putting off a visit to the dentist, and finally starting on the path to a healthier, brighter smile.

If you've already looked at Dr. Sammons' blog, you've seen how obvious his concern is for the guests who visit his practice, looking for better health and self-esteem. As a dentist, he has seen many times what a toll discomfort and anxiety can have on families, and how it unfortunately leads to more dental problems down the road.

These patients often haven't experienced for themselves the kind of dental experience that Dr. Sammons offer his patients, by using the latest evolutions and solutions in dentistry. It's exciting to see how empowered his patients become – many of who were once afraid of seeing a dentist. You can see how good they feel now that they are taking the steps to preserve their teeth for the next decades, and that they can trust their dentist and team to find any signs of trouble early on.

I found it to be a refreshing change to get to know a dental professional who understands how those of us who have had negative experiences feel. At his Indianapolis dental practice, they have really worked with their patients to understand how they can best help them feel good about their oral health.

"For example, when our patients can come to us on time for their regular recare appointments, knowing that we can improve their experience and that they won't feel discomfort, it's a truly rewarding feeling for us. We know that they feel good about having a healthy mouth, and a bright smile to give them confidence.

All of this can be a result of having a better dental experience. When we observe this change in how they feel about their oral health and about themselves, we feel like we really can change how people view dentistry. It's the reason why our dental practice keeps moving forward in providing comfortable amenities, the best in techniques, and down-to-earth communication with our guests, so that we can build long-lasting relationships and help them reach their goals. It's also why our dental team continually stays up-to-date on our training and skills." -Dr. Brad Sammons, Indianapolis Dentist
